

This is the first of two pages of a handwritten document. The text is written in a cursive style, likely in a historical script such as Kuzushiji. It begins with a header that appears to be a date: '1863年甲子年' (January 1863). The main body of the text consists of approximately 13 lines of dense, flowing characters. The handwriting is consistent and legible, though some characters are small and tightly packed. The document appears to be a formal record or a personal note from the Meiji period.

This page contains the continuation of the handwritten text. It starts with a date: '甲子年二月' (February 1863), followed by '川越啓' (Kawakoe no Kami), indicating the sender or recipient. The text continues with about 9 lines of cursive writing. The style is consistent with the first page, showing a high level of literacy and a specific calligraphic hand. The text concludes with a signature that appears to be '川越 啓'.

This page contains a date: '甲子年二月' (February 1863), followed by '川越啓' (Kawakoe no Kami). Below this, there are two lines of smaller text, likely a signature or a seal impression, rendered in the same cursive script. The page is mostly blank, with the text concentrated at the top.

This page contains a date: '甲子年三月' (March 1863), followed by '川越啓' (Kawakoe no Kami). Below this, there are two lines of smaller text, likely a signature or a seal impression, rendered in the same cursive script. The page is mostly blank, with the text concentrated at the top.

This page contains a date: '甲子年四月' (April 1863), followed by '川越啓' (Kawakoe no Kami). Below this, there are two lines of smaller text, likely a signature or a seal impression, rendered in the same cursive script. The page is mostly blank, with the text concentrated at the top.
